

March 2024

Those of you who joined our Zoom session on February 26 were treated to an inspiring display of photos and stories from Margaret Woods concerning local wildlife. Here are a few of the photos she showed us....

The Wildlife of Narrabeen Lagoon Catchment; the work of Sydney Wildlife Rescue and the Mobile Care Unit.

Margaret Woods with an injured Joey.

There was a major shooting of Eastern water dragons in Jan 2022 during which a number of animals were injured. Volunteers hunted for the injured animals and brought them back for treatment by the Vet. Margaret housed them until they were ready to be released.

Ringtail possums are rescued, treated and released. Volunteers often make dreys for possums who lose their homes.

Tawny Frogmouth chicks fell from their nest.

Geoheritage in Northern Sydney

By Zoom on May 27 at 7pm

Bob Conroy was formerly a senior officer in the National Parks and Wildlife Service.

He will introduce us to the long-term record of the evolution of the earth found in the landscape and surface processes that have taken place around Long Reef and across other areas of Northern Beaches.

Areas of geoheritage have specific values that need to be recognised and protected—often in different ways to conservation of the flora and fauna.
